

WORKSHOP

STRATEGIC VISION AND DECISION- MAKING

The biggest gap in confidence and skill amongst executive women I coach?
Strategy.

Specifically, developing and leading a strategic vision, and using this strategic vision as the foundation for excellent decision-making.

This half-day workshop addresses the skills and attributes you need to be a decisive and strategic leader and interpreter of your organisation's vision and goals.

You'll explore the practices of strategic thinking and decision-making, crucial for ensuring your own and your teams' effective contributions to the organisation's priorities.

By the end of this workshop you'll understand what constitutes a strategic vision, and why and how it must guide decision making.

You'll identify how individuals and teams contribute to a strategic vision, and you'll become confident translating strategic vision into actionable and reportable initiatives.

HALF-DAY, LASTING IMPACT

- What strategic vision is and why it matters
- Three key strategies that underpin success in leading your team to fulfil your organisation's strategic vision
- Navigating difficult decisions and ensuring their closest coherence to vision
- How to inspire your team and help them understand their strategic importance
- Defining your own strategic vision, for yourself and your career, and aligning your most important life decisions.
